How to Play Texas Hold 'em Poker

Texas Hold 'em Poker has developed into one of the most popular and widely played poker games around the world. The game requires skill and strategy to win and now you have the opportunity to test your abilities against other players.

The Game

Texas Hold 'em Poker is played at a table with up to 10 players at a time.

Each new player joining the game must start with a table stake within the table limits.

Prior to the hand being played two designated players are required to make a blind bet. These players are located to the left of the buck. These players are required to make a wager in accordance with the table limits.

Each player is then dealt 2 cards. A round of betting commences.

Each person in turn from the last blind bet may fold, call or raise.

In all further rounds of betting, the first active player to the left of the buck will be the first to act on their hand and may check or bet. If the player checks then all other players may check. Players are required to fold, call or raise once any player has placed a bet.

At the completion of the first round of betting three cards are dealt face up - This is called "The Flop" and is followed by a second round of betting.

Another card is dealt face up - This is called "The Turn" followed by another round of betting.

A final card called "The River" is dealt face up and the final round of betting is completed.

The winning hand consists of the best 5 card hand formed from the player's 2 hole cards and the 5 communal cards.

Players are required to place an equal amount into the pot for each betting round for them to continue in the game with the exception of a player going "All In" with insufficient funds to call the previous wagers.

If in any round of betting a player goes "All In" but has insufficient funds to match the previous wagers placed, the player will only be entitled to the pot formed that is covered by that player's total wagers.

The player will not be eligible to any other subsequent pots formed in the round of play.

The Reef Casino will either charge a prepaid participation fee or commission from the winning pot(s) for the purposes of conducting the game.
